

Greetings Brethren,

My Wife's Health:

This month I am going to let my wife speak for herself. The following is what she wrote on a page that she shares with a few family members and friends on June 8th.

"It's been a while since I posted details of this journey. Life was just hard. After having chemo, surgery, and twelve days of radiation (4 shy of finishing, but that's another story) behind me I still felt horrible with only enough energy to go from the bed to the couch and repeat day after day. I had scan after scan with good result and no sign of cancer anywhere.

My new doctor ran a cortisol test. The normal range is between 2-4 something and I measured .41 with all the symptoms of low cortisol. Five months ago was the last time it was measured with a normal measurement of 4.

I was given medicine for it which I've only been taking TWO days, and this morning was the first time in eight months I woke up feeling like ME. I slept through the night without pain, didn't feel groggy, and could walk normal. I actually was hungry today and could finish meals. I took the longest shower I ever had and stood up the whole time. I ran up the stairs without realizing it until I reached the top. I also walked 21 minutes in the church parking lot. It feels like a miracle to me, whether through finding the right medicine or not. God gave me back the life I missed after all this time, and I'll be forever grateful. I am officially considered by the doctors "cancer free."

I thank each and every one that lifted me up in prayer and supported and loved me along the way."

I too thank each of you for lifting us up in prayer and for your financial support. May our Lord be pleased to continue to work in our lives and in the church here. Tina still receives immunotherapy every three weeks. She has also had issues keeping her blood pressure where it needs to be. We are hopeful that this too will soon be resolved.
